Anchor (Stangl) Pottery Company 940 New York Avenue Trenton Mercer County New Jersey HAER No. NJ-26

HACK NJ, 11-TRET,

PHOTOGRAPHS

WRITTEN HISTORICAL AND DESCRIPTIVE DATA

Historic American Engineering Record National Park Service Department of the Interior Washington, D.C. 20240

HISTORIC AMERICAN ENGINEERING RECORD

HAER NJ, 11-TRET,

NJ-26

ANCHOR (STANGL) POTTERY COMPANY

Date:

Circa 1880

Location:

940 New York Avenue Trenton, Mercer County NJ

Designed by:

Unknown

Owned by:

Originally: Isreal Lacy

Presently: Stangl Pottery Company.

Significance:

The Anchor (Stangl) Pottery Company is a surviving example of a clay processing plant, involved in the making of flatware before the age of automation. At the time of documentation the jiggerman still made the pieces by using a forming tool to spread the clay evenly in the palster molds. Belt run clay mixers and pug mills, as well as filter presses can still be found at Stangl.

Transmitted by:

Dan Clement, 1983